This refreshed online course covers the new Skills for Care eight Common Induction Standards

This course covers the eight Common Induction Standards that form the basis of registration of all Social Care staff. The course contents describe the things that all care workers need to understand for their job role in providing care or support to individuals now matter what their needs may be. Induction training is compulsory across the entire social care sector.

Assessments

Each standard sets out the required background knowledge, with online activities and multiple-choice tests to check understanding.

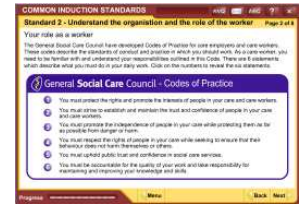

Evidence of Learning

On successful completion of each standard a certificate is generated which is embedded with the learner's name. This needs to be signed off by the line manager and a copy kept on file.

On successful completion of the whole course a master certificate is generated which is also embedded with the learner's name. This provides evidence that the named individual has met the mandatory minimum requirements to work unsupervised in the adult care sector; again this needs to be signed off by the line manager and a copy kept on file.
